The donor was a 14-year-old boy from Columbus, Georgia, who had died of head injuries from a motorbike accident. The surgical team was headed by renowned cardiac surgeon Dr. Robert B. Karp. This operation was also the first heart transplant in Alabama and the Deep South. The anonymous author wrote. "Doctors say the operation may eventually enable him to live a relatively normal life." The National news outlets took note of this operation because at that time few heart transplants had been attempted "without lasting success." This operation was also the first heart transplant in Alabama and the Deep South.
