INSTRUCTIONS:

All Laboratories are required to post this Emergency Notification Sign in the corridor outside of each laboratory. It should be posted to the wall on the same side as the official room number and just below the room number sign. If there is no room number posted, write the number in large, easy to read numbers on the sign itself. The sign should then be posted on the wall immediately to the right of the laboratory door. The top of the sign should be no less than 5 feet and no more than 6 feet from the floor. The sign must have the name and phone numbers of the current principal investigator responsible for that lab and 2 alternate names with current phone numbers of individuals with knowledge of the materials and potential hazards in that laboratory printed neatly and clearly. This information will be used by emergency personnel responding after hours to contact someone that can give them information about the contents of the laboratory and any potential hazards. The individuals listed on the sign must be able to communicate clearly with emergency responders and provide them with the requested information.
