Under contract to the Army Research Laboratory, UAB School of Engineering is developing artillery components that provide significant cost savings to the Army.

Current efforts under this contract are developing lightweight high performance vehicle armor using thermoplastic composite materials. Future efforts are being planned to apply these same technologies to develop improved body armor for our troops and also Army aviation and missile applications. 