

WHY UAB?

DIVERSITY IN PRACTICE

The 21st century will be defined by a global mix of cultures, ethnicities, identities and viewpoints. Our students learn and live in an open community that is dedicated to shared respect and understanding. UAB is home to the Institute for Human Rights, which brings together scholars and activists from around the world in a city that was one of the epicenters of the Civil Rights Movement.

CAMPUS + CITY

With a brand-new student center, rec center and residence halls surrounding an action-packed quad, UAB has the best of traditional campus life. But we're also located in the heart of Alabama's largest city, with dining, nightlife and outdoor attractions that draw visitors from around the world.

NIH FUNDED

UAB ranks 23rd (top 4 percent) nationally and 8th (top 2 percent) among public institutions in funding from the National Institutes of Health.

RESEARCH

The Carnegie Foundation identifies UAB as one of a handful of institutions rated for "very high research activity" that also is a leader in "community engagement."
