Six of these plays were written by students in my Playwriting class, responding to my challenge to write a script exploring something they felt strongly about. We hope it’s interesting for you to see and hear these plays and figure out what beliefs or feelings inspired each playwright.

It’s not hard to figure out the feelings that moved me to write “Two Kinds of Tired.” We’re presenting it here in honor of everyone engaged in the civil rights struggle in Birmingham fifty years ago. And today.

- Lee Shackleford, Festival Producer

THANKS!

Our directors, playwrights, and actors owe much gratitude to many people. This time our special thanks go to Donna Drake, Phoebe Miller, Cheryl Hall, and Mindy Wester Egan.

As always, we are all grateful to Shannon Thomason for her usual excellent work in spreading the word. And we thank our Department Chair, Kelly Allison, for continuing to support the Festival in spirit and in deed.

This is our twelfth Festival! And with the kind of help and hard work you all give us, we can keep going forever...
