The play will be performed with two fifteen minute intermissions.

Director’s comments on producing SFB at UAB:
Theatre, like many arts and philosophies, deals with the big questions of life, love, and existence. Why are we here? What is the meaning of my life? What is love? And the big one we all face: Who am I?

For me the Theatre is a place to explore those questions in a way that has the greatest opportunity for immediacy and identification on the most personal level with our audiences.

My belief is that we go to the theatre to be in the presence of how these questions of life are being tackled by people very much like ourselves. We go to see the choices of others and to empathize with consequences as well as the triumphs of their actions.

Anton Chekhov is able to do this in his plays and short stories. But in 2014 at the Wooly Mammoth Theatre in Washington D.C. I saw a modern re-invention of one of Chekhov’s most famous plays: The Seagull. This re-invention was the play we are producing: Stupid F@#$ing Bird. The title itself is a deconstruction but very much an homage to Chekhov’s masterpiece.

SFB is a reimagining by the playwright and director Aaron Posner that literally and figuratively explores an important challenge leveled by Chekhov at the theatre world: “We need new forms!” Essentially we need to change HOW we tell the stories worth telling!

SFB is a play that possesses profound transformational potential and power. It remains faithful to the exploration of Chekhov’s complicated themes of art, personal existence, and the vicissitudes love, while bringing a cutting edge modernistic sensibility and sense of humor to the telling.

The result is a work of art that is compellingly timely as well as being universal in its timelessness. It explores the pain of love honestly while giving a wink and a nod to the absurdity of life. One exchange typifies this modern sensibility:

Dev: Try loving something more than your self! I’m just sayin’.

Con: It does something to you. Something worthwhile.

Dev: Oh for God’s sake! Are you kidding me!

Con: I love almost everything better than myself!

The opportunity for student actors to work and collaborate on such an edgy new piece is wildly beneficial. First of all it is currently being produced in all of the major professional regional theatres. Graduates will be familiar with what is artistically current.

More importantly it provides young actors the opportunity to speak with an authentic voice of their own generation, expressing urgent thoughts, beliefs, and anxieties about their own identifiable circumstances. And this kind of artistic ownership adds indomitable power and purpose to their experience.
