Over the next several weeks, this newsletter will showcase just a few of 2020’s achievements from across each domain of the CCTS, starting this week with Research Commons.

2020 Highlights: Research Commons

Over the last year, CCTS members rose to the challenge of continuing work in a virtual or socially-distant setting in the midst of a global pandemic. Despite many challenges and pivots, there were still more achievements than we could hope to list here.

Check out a few 2020 Research Commons Highlights

COVID-19 Research Enterprise Initiative

When COVID-19 took its footing, CCTS Research Commons mobilized a team that helped set the stage for investigators to work together in a coordinated, timely effort to study the virus’ impact on health.

Don’t Miss the National COVID Cohort Collaborative (N3C) Open House

This Tuesday, Jan. 19th, N3C is hosting an open house to invite CTSA members, newcomers, and the wider translational research community to join the 26 institutions and 500+ investigators utilizing this collaborative platform, providing access to data from over 2.6M COVID patients. A one-hour symposium will kick off a week of open Clinical Domain Team meetings to welcome new collaborators and help them launch their research questions.

Learn more about N3C at the CCTS and register for the national open house.
