TIERS Takes a Holiday Break in December

The Training Interdisciplinary & Emerging Research Scholars (TIERS) program is giving our CCTS members the gift of time this month and looking forward to seeing everyone again in the new year. To help us plan a year of impactful training opportunities, please take our 30 second survey to champion the topics you’d like to see covered in 2022.

UALCAN: Taking Cancer Data Further

UALCAN (University of Alabama at Birmingham CANcer web portal, "You all can!") is a comprehensive, user-friendly, and interactive web resource for analyzing cancer OMICS data that includes large scale cancer RNA sequencing and clinical proteomics data. This resource was developed and released to public use by Darshan Chandrashekar, PhD, from the Department of Pathology and O’Neal Comprehensive Cancer Center, under the leadership of Sooryanarayana Varambally, PhD, to enhance the speed of the cancer research, biomarker and target discovery. This resource is developed for usability by both experts and researchers with no background in large scale sequencing and data analysis. Since its inception in late 2017, this continuously evolving cancer data analysis portal has received over 760,000 site visits from across the world and over 2,100 citations and received over 1000 citations in 2021.

Find out what UALCAN can do for your cancer research today.
The CCTS is delighted to acknowledge and celebrate the steady stream of news about the outstanding accomplishments of our CCTS members.

Full Events Calendar
1. What does the CCTS mean to you?
   The opportunity to innovate and create opportunity from discovery to delivery in medicine is a privilege. The CCTS captures that energy across our region and brings teams together in very special ways. The CCTS can and does make a difference in everything we do.

2. What’s your dream vacation or the best vacation you’ve ever taken?
   I love traveling. A pied a terre in a pedestrian district in Paris with a baguette, cheese and red wine or the late afternoon at the enoteca in Montepulciano’s town square are hard to beat. But dangling your toes in the lake in the Adirondacks as the sun rises is best of all.

3. What is the last show you binge-watched?
   The Mandalorian

4. What are the movies you loved the most?
   The Lord of the Rings Trilogy
   All of Star Wars
