The All of Us Research Program Researchers Convention is Happening Soon

This convention provides an opportunity for a broad spectrum of researchers using the

All of Us Research Program data and tools offered through the Research Hub to showcase their work with colleagues, peers, and others who share a passion for advancing health research. The two-day virtual event will focus on researchers at various educational and professional career stages across two separate but linked events: The Minority Student Research Symposium (March 31) and Science Day (April 1). The schedule includes presentations by many investigators from CCTS Partner Institutions.
